PREFACE

ENCOURAGED by the very flattering reception accorded to my first little work of "HAND SHADOWS", which has run through several editions in a few months only, I have been induced to pursue the subject farther; and, as many of the public are no doubt so well acquainted with my handywork in the book referred to, as to have got it by this time at their finger's ends, I venture to introduce to my readers a few more of those friendly spirits or shades, who, without any incantation, are so far obedient, by aid of a few mystic signs only, as always to attend my summons.

They are an incongruous assemblage; and if the Pig felt himself a little elevated to be associated with Grandpapa in the first series, we may expect that Mrs. Gamp will feel herself no less honoured and surprised, to find herself in company with his Grace, the hero of Waterloo, in the present motley group; whilst Mr. Punch will, I fear, think there has been something underhanded, and will doubtless complain that he was not palmed off before, along with his Dog Toby.

In conclusion, I have still reason to hope, that my readers, however unexpected may be the result of their reflections, will still continue to go hand -in-hand with me; for I would not wish to realise, the fate of the Dog in the fable; or, whilst laying aside the chisel for a while in order to cater for the public, incur any very material loss, in grasping at the shadow.

There is one point at all events, upon which we shall be no doubt agreed, that had I been Briaricus, I might have done more.

HENRY BURSILL.

August, 1859.

BROWN'S SCHOOL SERIES

PLAYGROUND & INDOOR GAMES

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

EDITED BY
WINIFRED WILSON,
Author of 'The Book of Games for Boys and Girls', etc.

PRYOR PUBLICATIONS

First published about 1910, this book will make a major contribution to encourage children to play more of the traditional games. The 107 indoor and 119 playground games, such as Soldier Hopscotch and Trees, make a wide variety from which to choose.

THE CRAZY CIRCUS

This edition of "The Crazy Circus" follows in the tradition of those first published in the 1950's. There are 32 illustrations of various characters taken from the circus. The pages are cut so that each illustration can have the top, middle or bottom of another bringing a smile to even those in the most melancholy of moods, no matter what age they may be.

175mm x 125mm / 7" x 5" - 32 Pages.
Paperback. ISBN: 0 946014 40 X.

CHILDREN'S SINGING GAMES 1894

Collected and edited by Alice Gomme, and again delightfully illustrated by Winifred Smith, here are eight games, with words, music and instructions on playing, together with information on their origins.

Alice Gomme made a significant contribution to children's literature, particularly recognised by Iona and Peter Opie sixty years after her death. They compiled their books Love and Language of School Children, Children's Games in Street and Playground and The Singing Game, together with her two volumes of Children's Singing Games - of which this was the first.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF STUCK-UP PEOPLE

ALBERT SMITH

'We are about to expose, as simply and truthfully as we can, the foolish conventionalities of a large proportion of the middle classes of the present day, who believe that position is attained by climbing up a staircase of moneybags.' Delightfully illustrated.

Originally published 1847 128 pages Size 13cm x 10.5cm
